Hello Everyone,

I have finally made some major changes to my web page. The old daycare/ knitting page is still here if you click on this link Daycare/knitting page. The new site will be dedicated to my newest love of arts and crafts. There are some pictures of my latest work an altered/mixed media style memory quilt. It has been so much fun to make and I am enjoying the hunt for things to ad to each panel. You can see this and more on my Altered Art Page.

I also make and sell a lot of my art at a great little artists mall in south San Jose California called Elegant Corner..

Here are some images from my booth there...

Update Notices,

Hello Everyone,

It has been forever since I did an update of my web site. I have deleted some sections and added new ones. The daycare and craft pages are still here but most of the recipes are gone for now. New ones will be added soon.

As have many people, my friends and family have been hit with cancer in the past couple of years. I am tired of not being able to do anything for those suffering. I donate Blood to the Red Cross. I sort food at Second Harvest Food Bank. But there must be something else I can do!?. Right?. Well, recently I read an article in one of my knitting magazines about a group from NewYork that got together and knit or crocheted pink scarves for patients undergoing breast cancer treatments. I thought that was so great that I wanted to do that to. So I am Starting the Craft for Cancer Page. It is full of information and links to sites and information on crafting for cancer and other charties and how you can help. I will also start a blog to show my progress with organizing my little group. We are only a group of two right now. We welcome more members.
